

ERGONOMIC SERVICES: ERGOLITE

Before you can fix the problem, you have to understand it. That's the principle behind ERGOLite, DORN's high-level ergonomic review and assessment service geared toward worksites across industries, especially those where manual labor and high levels of exertion are required. Musculoskeletal disorders (MSDs) and repetitive motion injuries (RMIs) form the bulk of workplace injuries and illnesses, and poor ergonomic standards lie at the heart of many of these incidents.

The ERGOLite assessment takes a wide-angle view of the worksite and your employees' interaction with it, offering analysis of an entire department or job floor. Our Specialists thoroughly evaluate the nature of the work being done at each workstation and across the area in question, identifying risk factors for injury and chronic pain. We engage with employees to learn about how they do their jobs, discovering the patterns that can contribute to high costs and lost productivity over time. With the data in hand, our providers create detailed recommendations for improvement across the entire site, including physiological elements where appropriate as well as adjustments to workstations, personal protective equipment, worksite layout, task design, and shift scheduling. The goal: a comprehensive roadmap toward a safer, more productive job floor.

Benefits of ERGOLite:

- Clear environmental hazards from the worksite
- Identify problem areas and highlight immediate improvements
- Engage with employees and demonstrate your commitment to safety
- Develop a plan toward a safer, healthier workforce
